

The Chelsea Farmers' Market on Saturday mornings has been a huge hit this summer. Here are a few of the many "attractions" at this year's market.

Tantré Farm is a certified organic farm which grows about 50 varieties of vegetables as well as strawberries, raspberries and melons. Richard, Deb (above, left) and their daughter Ariana live on the farm and are often joined by seasonal workers and interns throughout the year. They also operate a Community Supported Agricultural (CSA) group where produce from a small farm is directed to the community members who buy a share of harvest. Members pick up their weekly share of vegetables from June to October. They also sell their produce at the Ann Arbor and Chelsea Markets as well as provide fresh vegetables for local stores and restaurants. Learn more about a CSA and the harvest calendar at www.tantrefarm.com

'Our' Farmers' Market

Back Forty Acres is family-owned farm located southwest of Chelsea. Brothers Kevin and Larry along with their wives DeAnn and Stephanie are raising animals and birds on pastures and with natural feeds. Larry and Stephanie were selling fresh eggs at the market and taking orders for broilers, turkey, pork and beef. They spoke to shoppers about their heritage breeds, pasturing and feeding methods which bring quality and flavor to their meats and poultry. Their Web site www.fortyacres.com explains about their farm and their products.